THE HUNTER'S VISION!

Upon a rock that, high and sheer, Rose from the mountain's breast, A weary hunter of the deer And leaned to the soft summer air

His hot, red brow and sweaty bair, All dim in haze the mountains lay, With dimmer vales between; And riversglimmered on their way, fly forests faintly sees;

While ever rose a murmuring sound, From brooks below and bees around. He listened till he seemed to hear That whether in the mind or ear

The listener scarce might know, With such a tone so sweet and mild

The watching mother lulls her child. "Thou weary huntsman," it said, The pleasant land of rest is spread Before thy weary feet,

And those whom thou would gladly see Are waiting there to welcome thee ." He looked, and 'twist the earth and sky

A shadowy region met his eye, And grow beneath his gaze, As if the vapors of the air Had gathered into shapes so fair.

Groves freshened as he looked, and flowers, Showed bright on rocky bank, And fountains welled beneath the bowers, Where deer and pheasant drank. He saw the gilttering streams, he heard

The rustling bow and twittering bid. And friends-the dead-in boyhood dear, There lived and walked again,

And there was one who many a year Within, her grave had lain, A fair young girl, the hamiet's pride-Hisheart was breaking when she died:

Bounding, a s was her wont, she came Right toward his resting place, And stretched her head, and called his name
